Serbs escalate tensions, test peace-keepers

by Robert H. Reid
The Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina -- A NATO jet swooped over a besieged northern town Sunday after Bosnian state radio claimed Serb warplanes destroyed a bridge in an attack similar to the one that provoked NATO retaliation.

Neither NATO nor the United Nations could confirm the reported attack on Maglaj, a town held by Bosnia's Muslim-led government about 40 miles north of Sarajevo. Bosnian Serb militiamen surrounding the enclave have refused to allow U.N. peacekeepers or officials to go to Maglaj.

Bosnian Serbs ridiculed the government's claim, accusing the Muslim-led Bosnian army of faking an air strike.

"There have been no [air] bombardments of Maglaj," said a statement from the Bosnian Serb military in Banja Luka. "The so-called Army of Bosnia-Herzegovina, following its old recipe, sets fire to heaps of old tires, wishing to create an impression of bombardment of the town."

Bosnian radio and the television in neighboring Croatia said Serb planes targeted Maglaj's only bridge, which spans the Bosna river, destroying the structure.

Such a raid would be a flagrant violation of the no-fly zone imposed by the U.N. Security Council over Bosnia. It also would be a challenge to NATO, which has been patrolling the zone since April and has begun showing a new resolve to act forcibly against warring parties in the former Yugoslav state.

Two U.S. Air Force F-16 fighters shot down four Bosnian Serb fighter-bombers in central Bosnia last Monday. U.N. officials said the Serb planes were attacking Bosnian government targets.

Gen. Rasim Delic, commander of the Bosnian army, reported the alleged bombing to Lt. Gen. Sir Michael Rose, commander of U.N. peacekeepers in Bosnia, and demanded "more effective" NATO action. Bosnian radio said Serb artillery also shelled Maglaj after the air attack.

There were other signs Bosnian Serbs were testing NATO.

U.N. officials said Saturday they found six Serb howitzers in the immediate vicinity of Sarajevo, in apparent violation of a NATO ultimatum that all heavy weapons around the besieged capital be withdrawn or put under U.N. control.

Although the Serbs denied the howitzers violated the ultimatum, U.N. officials said the Serbs agreed to withdraw the weapons.

On Sunday, U.N. officials reported another shooting by Serbs near positions held by French peacekeepers in southern Sarajevo. Senior U.N. officials met with Bosnian Serb and Bosnian government officials in an effort to bolster the nearly 4-week-old cease-fire around the city.

Serb forces fired at French U.N. troops near Sarajevo's Jewish cemetery Saturday night, in what U.N. officials said was a deliberate attack on peacekeepers. One French soldier was slightly injured, a U.N. spokesman, Maj. Rob Annink, said. French troops returned fire.

It was the second incident in three days involving French peacekeepers at the contested hillside cemetery in southern Sarajevo. On Thursday, French troops returned fire when Bosnian Serb snipers shot at them.

With the cease-fire between Serbs and Muslim-led government forces under strain, the U.N. chief representative in the former Yugoslavia, Yasushi Akashi, flew to Sarajevo on Sunday.

He met with Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic in the Serb stronghold of Pale east of Sarajevo and later in the city with Bosnian President Alija Izetbegovic. Akashi said he made progress toward reopening Tuzla airport, which has been kept closed for months by shelling from Serb artillery.

General fee distributed among organizations

by Leah Barnum
News staff writer

Student government groups were among those granted the most money from the student-funded general fee, which was distributed Saturday among the 57 campus organizations who had completed their petitions.

The Undergraduate Student Government and the Graduate Student Senate were allotted much more money than most other organizations, with $31,073 and $25,000, respectively.

Other groups granted large portions of the $370,818 available for allocation were Student Activities, which received $29,600, and Cultural Events, which received $21,500.

The amount allocated for the 1994-95 school year has been increased by 5 percent, or $17,658, from last year's total of $353,160, according to Christopher Dalton, vice president for planning and budgeting.

The money was distributed by the 16 members of the Advisory Committee on General Fee Allocations, a committee consisting entirely of students this year. The committee is chaired by USG President Jason Jackson.

The meeting was conducted by the former vice president of student affairs, Robert Arrowsmith.

The decision is totally up to the members of the committee -- all students this year, said Ron Zweirlein, interim vice president for student affairs.

"The decision is based upon groups' petitions, and how successful they've been in past years," Zweirlein said. "Most of the returning groups will get money if their programs have been successful."

Only one group, BG 24 News, was given less money than it received previous years, because

Teams shine, BG fans dim

Hats off to both the men's and women's basketball squads for their victories over the hated Toledo Rockets Saturday at Anderson Arena.

But more important than the two wins (each team had already clinched the home court advantage for the first round of the upcoming MAC tournament) was the support that each team received from the fans.

Sadly enough, it was quite a surprise to see the gym filled to capacity -- although granted that many of the fans were from nearby Toledo -- for BG fans have a bad history of not supporting their teams.

It's ridiculous that the women's team, which has compiled a 23-3 mark (including a 17-1 record in the league) has averaged less than 2,000 people per home game.

Meanwhile, it's just as disappointing to see fewer than 3,000 fans supporting the men's team -- which is enjoying its finest season in nearly a decade.

What makes the situation worse is that students don't even have to pay to attend these contests, but merely have to show their identification cards.

It's hard to call BG students "fair weather fans," because that implies that they only attend games when the teams are winning. This obviously isn't the case though, as Falcon athletic teams have been successful all year without the support of many fans.

Instead, BG students should be called "fair" fans at best. They only seem to support the teams in important contests. While the teams surely appreciate this fact, they deserve more.

Talking about free speech

"Congress shall make no law, respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the government for a redress of grievances."

The First Amendment is one of the most sacred and treasured rights that is affordable to all Americans. It is something that is rarely enjoyed around the world, and in many places people are persecuted for speaking what they believe.

In America, we don't have to worry about persecution, although there are exceptions. Actions of free speech sometimes result in confrontations, and at times they can become violent. The violence which sometimes occurs, is not the purpose of the First Amendment. Its purpose is to assure a group's or individual's voice doesn't become oppressed and silenced, regardless of whether the group or person is of the minority, the majority, the right or the left.

Some forms of expression are protected more than others, and for good reason. Political and social commentary are protected the most by the courts, for they are essential to a true democracy. Then comes the protection of commercial and non-obscene sexual expression, taking into account that it is not offensive and it doesn't provoke anyone.

The forms of free speech that have virtually no protection under the First Amendment are obscenity, false advertising, and fighting or hate words. It seems the last forms of expression have received more protection lately, especially with the latest round of Ku Klux Klan rallies.

One thing which doesn't seem right is adults receive more free speech protection than children and adolescents. In elementary and secondary schools many forms of religious expression are not allowed due to the "separation of church and state" statutes, but now some of that has even changed. Recent Supreme Court rulings now say religious expression is allowed as long as it's student initiated. This change was brought about by the American Center for Law & Justice, but not without a challenge by the ACLU.

The press is the only business which receives specific protection by the First Amendment, and it states that the government isn't allowed to abridge "the freedom of speech, or of the press."

The News staffers also enjoy the luxury the First Amendment offers. It isn't something to be taken lightly though, and the freedom of the press and free speech can be abused.

Censorship is one sticky point in any First Amendment debate, and everyone has a different opinion to what an act of censorship is. Some say when Toledo's ABC affiliate channel 24 decided not to air NYPD Blue, it was an act of censorship. At the same time, many consider the thought police of the politically correct a group of people that try to censor free speech. An act of censorship is to remove anything that is obscene or objectionable.

Censorship isn't always a wrongful act, for some things need to be censored. Not everything is suitable for everyone's eyes and ears, especially children.

Lately the opinion section has turned into a merry-go-round of ideas and viewpoints. First, I write a column, and then Andrea Wood follows with a response to my column, and then Norm Van Ness follows with a response to Andrea's column. It can give you a headache after a while. One would think that Susan Powter would be yelling "Stop the insanity!" by now. This free flow of well thought out beliefs is essential, and it encourages people to think.

Even though I'm a conservative, I like to hear and read what other people have to say. Whether a person is a liberal, conservative, moderate, feminist, or holds another ideology it does not matter to me. I can usually find something I can ject of laughter, or to try to belittle someone. But just like Andrea Wood pointed out last week, we do have stupid people on this campus and around the world. It is also a matter of ignorance.

I've been called "controversial" by the Insider, but I don't consider myself any more controversial than the next columnist. I just write my opinions on issues that are of interest to me at the moment. If I am "controversial," then so be it.

We need to continue to have ideologies from every point of view to be expressed, for it's what America is all about.

Environmental Update: There is no global warming.

This is to all those who say I can't support my opinions with facts, concerning the column I wrote last week.

A new study presented by the National Academy of Sciences cast serious doubt on the myth of global warming. The study shows that despite high levels of carbon-dioxide emissions, satellite data concludes there has been insignificant temperature changes over the past 15 years.

Candidate needs earth focus

With the Undergraduate Student Government debate still fresh in my mind, I felt compelled to write in to The News and express my opinion of Thursday night's events. So denying my body the sleep it is desperately craving currently, I simply must expose the truth regarding the issues surrounding our candidates and their stand on environmental concerns for Bowling Green.

What hits me the hardest is today's politicians seem to be more concerned with saying the popular thing rather than addressing the issues which need our attention most. This is not entirely their fault. No, in fact, to be successful in politics, one must be able to speak, dress and appeal to voters more than the other candidates. In this world of politically correct mumble-jumble, people's concerns seem to get lost somewhere between the "mud slinging" and re-election speeches. Does anyone see what is truly going on? Where are all the fighters for equal rights, or for freedoms, or in my case, the rights of our environment and the unborn children who shall inherit this world?

I have had the privilege of working closely with this year's USG presidential candidates and must admit this race is going to be a close one which should only make things more interesting. All three candidates, Jen Mathe, Doug Minton and Matt Fair seemed to be well informed of most of the issues students currently face in their collegiate struggle, though of course they all disagreed on how we should go about ensuring a better "living and learning environment" to steal the phrase from the legend himself, Mr. Jason T. Jackson. But there was one issue which did separate all three, letting each candidate be seen for their individual beliefs. This issue is our environment. Not until now has the environmental voice been heard in the USG mainly because society, for a large part, still places environmental issues in the "backseat" and it is no different here at BG.

What I felt so urgently to do is to explain where the three candidates stand on our environment. Like I already stated, I have been working with the candidates to help prepare on environmentally related issues. All of them have been very cooperative, naturally, but two of them need to be recognized, Doug Minton and Jen Mathe. If students are to make the best decision, we must know where these individuals stand.

First, both Jen and Doug have agreed they will, in fact, place a new member on the USG president's cabinet, an environmental member, to advise the president on important issues related to campus. This is the first time such a position has ever been held in USG, so naturally campus environmentalists were pleased to hear this news. As for Matt, no offense my friend, but seeing how you never expressed any interest in the environmental groups' concern here at BG, I will not be expressing much interest for you in this article. But rising above her opponents, Jen practices what she preaches. Being in charge of her sorority's recycling program, Jen fully believes environmental issues, such as recycling, are important and supports the environmental movement. Furthermore, Jennifer has already stated to the E.A.G. that win or lose, she will be back to our meetings to get involved.

This is not to say Doug Minton does not support environmental causes, for to an extent, he does too. Doug has been extremely helpful in researching questions I have presented him and took the time to listen to this BG student's concern. To the both of you, I wish you the best and know that no matter who wins, USG shall be in good hands with strong, dedicated leaders the two of you already are.

To all of you students/voters, no matter what candidate you support, get out there and vote. Express your views and make your mark count. There is no better way to make a difference than to start caring and let the world know your thoughts. If we are ever truly going to make life better, we must work together for the betterment of all.

Jason E. Wolfe is the chairman of Environmental Action Group and a guest columnist for The BG News.

the group violates the fourth criterion for funding, according to ACGFA members.

The fourth criterion states that "a request for funding of academic programs and curricular auxiliaries should be made to the academic unit to which the requesting organization is affiliated."

It further states that "academic programs are defined as those which grant or generate academic credit...and whose goals and membership correspond with those of specific majors...on campus."

Because students working for the BG 24 News are able to earn academic credit, ACGFA members ruled that they will receive no money this year, despite the fact that BG 24 News received $500 from the committee last year.

Violation of criterion four was only applied to one other group, the American Institute of Architecture Students, which were granted no money either. However, AIAS was not granted money in previous years.

The committee decided the allocations by majority vote of those who were present for each particular group's presentation, Arrowsmith said.

If a member was not present for the presentation, he or she was not allowed to vote for the amount of money that group was allocated, he added.

alumnus and current relief pitcher for the Los Angeles Dodgers.

"It seems like she knows everybody," said Greg Predmore, Union building manager. "When she talks with someone she always seems to know something about their personal life."

As her co-worker for 10 years, Predmore said Mills "keeps things exciting and interesting while being dependable and reliable." He said she treats her regular customers with care.

Her "regulars" are important to Mills, who said she gets enjoyment from knowing them almost better than they know themselves.

"It makes me feel good to remember what people buy," she said. "I know what newspaper they'll want or what candy they eat before they ask. I think they appreciate it, too."

Mills said she has seen fashions and hair lengths come and go, but students basically remain the same.

"I don't think the kids are any different now," she said. "If anything, they're better and more open about things."

Mills began her University career as a sales clerk in The Little Shop, the Union card and gift boutique. She moved to her present location in 1979, and has managed the hotel for over 10 years.

Since then, Mills has met many visiting celebrities, including Bob Hope, Red Skelton and The Carpenters. She received an autographed book from author Alex Haley after leaving requests in his room.

Mills begins her desk duties each day at 6:30 a.m. Along with her regular chores she handles frequent requests for items like safety pins, a needle and thread, and wire hangers for people locked out of cars.

She also must contend with special requests.

"One time somebody asked us to read the comics over the phone," she said. "He wanted us to read a certain cartoon because he couldn't get out to buy a paper."

When she isn't following University hockey and the Montreal Canadiens, Mills enjoys visiting Amish country in Indiana and occasionally staying with relatives in California. She also likes to browse through flea markets and craft shows, and collects teddy bears and quilts.

Although she declined a retirement package two years ago, Mills plans to bid farewell to the University sometime next year. She said her plan is to relax with her grandchildren, Josh and Katie Sockrider, and maybe visit Hawaii.

Mills said it will be hard to say goodbye to her student friends.

"They're just really good kids," she said.

Voinovich announces Tornado Safety Week

by Aaron Epple
News contributing writer

Although one does not have to worry about being swept away to Oz, tornadoes do present a danger for residents in Ohio.

As a result, Gov. George Voinovich has declared the week of March 14 Tornado Safety Week.

A statewide tornado drill will occur Wednesday March 16 at 10:10 in which an alert tone will set off warning sirens throughout the fire departments in Wood County and other areas in Ohio.

"We'll be closing down the [County Courthouse] and going into a shelter," said Bud Dennis, county emergency director.

Also during the week, there will be three tornado seminars on tornado instruction at Troi Villa mobile home park in Troy Township on March 12 and 26, and at Friendly Village mobile home park in Perrysburg Township on March 15.

The seminars will include slideshows and pamphlets presented by Wood County Emergency Management as well as instruction for residents in the event of a tornado, according to Chrissy Jackson, manager of Friendly Village.

The residents will be told "what to do, when to do it and how important it is not to delay doing it, when a tornado approaches," she said.

Although no major destruction occurred, there were 114 tornado sightings in Ohio last year, Dennis said.

Dennis said Wood County Emergency Management will be distributing tests to Bowling Green city schools as a means of finding out if the individual schools are prepared should a tornado occur.

"It's important they have an exercise, so they know what to do," he said.

He added that schools will send the results back to his office.

Superintendent of Schools Richard Cummings said the drills are extremely important to keep the students aware of the scope of the problem, even though tornadoes in this particular area have not been frequent. "You never expect a flat tire but you always carry a spare with you," he said.

Cummings said it is beneficial that the students are being shown what to do.

University police, although not directly involved, do have "monitors" who make sure everything is sound for evacuation in the University buildings.

"We have at least one dry run a year," said Barbara Waddell, public information officer.

The Christophers, a non-profit organization that supports the concept of service to God and all humanity, is sponsoring a video contest for college students.

The film or video must be five minutes or less in length and represent the theme of "One person can make a difference."

The participant must label the cassette with the entry title, the length and his or her name and address.

"Through this contest, the Christophers challenges college students to capture on video the Christopher belief that one person can make a difference," said John Catoir, director of the Christophers.

"By their vision and their enthusiasm, participants demonstrate that youth is still a time for idealism and that the leaders of tomorrow still dream of a better world," Catoir said.

All of the entries will be judged on the ability to capture the theme, artistic and technical proficiency and adherence to all contest rules.

Initially, the entries will be judged by a panel selected by the Christophers.

A blue ribbon jury comprised of representatives from the media, academia and the Chris-tophers board of directors will then make the final selections.

The top three choices will receive cash awards. First prize is $3000, second prize is $2000 and third prize is $1000. There will also be five honorable mention prizes which will have rewards of $500.

In addition, the top three entries will be aired nationwide on the Christopher Closeup television series.

According to Seil Harrendorf, a producer of the Christopher Closeup television show, the submission of a video gives broadcast rights permission to the Christophers and the winners agree to the use of their work in any Christopher production.

Entries are due for the contest by June 10 and winners will be notified on Sept. 8.

"[The contest] is an opportunity for students to discover the innermost talents and realize that they too have the ability to inspire others and make a difference," Catoir said.

Students covered by health proposal

College Press Service

PORTLAND, Maine -- First Lady Hillary Rodham Clinton said many college students who currently fall through the cracks of health care coverage will be included in President Clinton's proposed package.

Clinton sought to reassure independent students that they will be able to afford coverage.

"Under the president's plan there are provisions for helping to provide discounts for students to enable them to be insured," she said.

The proposal will "also support facilities like school health clinics and university clinics so that they have real access to health care," she said.

"Every citizen will be included in health care," she said.

High school seniors to get another chance with test

The Associated Press

High school seniors in Ohio who have not passed the four parts of a ninth-grade proficiency test get another chance this week so they can graduate on time with their classmates.

About 10,000 seniors, or 9 percent of those in the state, have at least one section to pass. Seniors will get one more chance during tests in May.

Meanwhile, this will be the first time eighth-graders can take the test. About half the districts have expressed interest in the early testing, said Roger Trent of the state Department of Education.

Eighth-graders who choose to take the test will not be eligible to do so again until March 1995.

"What the test measures is material covered through the eighth-grade," said Rebecca Chapman, a spokeswoman for the education department. Giving the test to eighth-graders gives more time for intervention to improve scores, she said.

Gene Troy, superintendent and high school principal at Butler County's New Miami Local School District, said the district decided not to offer the test to eighth-graders.

"We feel the longer they're in school before taking the test the better prepared they are," he said.

In Cleveland schools, Ohio's largest public school system, 40 percent of the 2,200-member senior class has not passed one or more of the four proficiency test parts.

The senior class represents the remnant of what was 6,700 freshmen who entered ninth-grade in Cleveland schools four years ago. Some have moved or transferred elsewhere, but most have dropped out.

"This shows that every aspect of the system is broken," said

Superintendent Sammie Campbell Parrish. "None of us should be able to sleep at night until we've made a dramatic improvement in the situation. That's why our reform efforts are urgent - we can't afford to slow down."

Teachers said students often are passed from one grade to the next, even if they have not learned grade material.

"Look, I may have 25 kids in my class," said Martha Basile, an English teacher at West Technical High School. "Maybe 12 of them never show up, so they get F's. Out of the 13 left, I have kids who show up every day, generally do their work, but don't pass the tests. How can I flunk them?"

Last children's psych hospital in Ohio may close

The Associated Press

CINCINNATI - The state's last children's psychiatric hospital could become a victim of the shift from hospitalization to outpatient care.

The problem at Millcreek Psychiatric Center for Children is in the numbers. The budget has increased while the number of patients has steadily declined.

Although closing is not imminent, the state and the hospital are analyzing the figures.

"We are concerned with the cost at Millcreek, but you can't just pull the plug at a hospital while those services are still needed by kids," Samuel Hibbs, spokesman for the Ohio Department of Mental Health, told The Cincinnati Enquirer for a story published Sunday.

In fiscal 1988, Millcreek had an average resident population of 41 children, a budget of $5.5 million and a per-patient daily cost of $371. Today, the budget is about $6 million and there are 19 patients.

That has driven the daily cost per resident to about $900, nearly $400 more a day than any other state mental hospital. The Pauline Warfield Lewis Center, which houses adults, costs $258 daily per patient.

High cost was one reason the state in 1992 closed Sagamore Hills Children's Psychiatric Hospital near Cleveland, where daily per-patient cost was $517.

"The answer that has been coming down lately is this isn't the most cost-effective way to offer services," said Peter Steele, Millcreek's chief executive officer.

Although treating fewer patients, Millcreek has had trouble cutting fixed costs such as utilities and staffing, he said. The hospital is looking for additional treatment programs to offer to spread the expense.

Steele hopes to persuade Hamilton County and other local governments and agencies to finance alternative treatment programs at Millcreek that could include outpatient counseling, in-home therapy and day-treatment.

Once part of the old Longview State Hospital, Millcreek became separate in the late 1970s. It regularly treated more than 100 children at a time.

But the population decreased after the state passed a law in 1988 that gave counties incentives to avoid hospitalizing the mentally ill.

Although the law has contributed to Millcreek's troubles, the intent was good, Steele said.

"When we had about 100 kids, a lot of those kids didn't require hospitalization," he said.

Rubber workers agree to contract

The Associated Press

DAYTON, Ohio - A union representing 1,800 workers at two General Motors Corp. plants reached a tentative contract agreement late Saturday, averting a strike at the last minute.

An official of United Rubber Workers Local 87, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the agreement was reached at about the time the union planned to strike at 12:01 a.m. Sunday. The official declined to reveal details.

GM spokesman Chuck Kronbach said the agreement was signed at about 12:30 a.m. Sunday. Work at the two plants was not interrupted.

Kronbach said the six-year contract includes wage and benefit increases, but he could not provide further details. He said the agreement also included improved job security and performance goals.

"We're pleased the parties were able to reach a tentative agreement without a disruption of production," he said. "Both parties kept a strong customer focus throughout the bargaining process."

The union had threatened to strike at 12:01 a.m. Saturday, but pushed the deadline back 24 hours after making progress in talks Friday. Negotiations resumed Saturday morning.

The union represents workers at GM's Delco Chassis plants in Dayton and Vandalia. The plants make engine mounts, springs, ball joints, brake hoses and other parts.

A five-day strike at a Michigan GM parts plant in 1990 idled five of the company's assembly plants.

The two sides negotiated over wages, benefits and local issues.

All six passengers live in twin-engine crash

The Associated Press

ZANESVILLE, Ohio - A twin-engine plane carrying six people crashed on its approach to an airport Saturday morning as the pilot tried to make an emergency landing because of engine trouble.

All six passengers survived. One was slightly injured.

The Muskingum County Sheriff's Department said Gloria Weigart, 61, of Lititz, Pa., was treated at Bethesda Hospital for a broken rib.

A Piper Aztec piloted by Michael Smucker, 43, of Lititz, Pa., was en route to Chicago from Lancaster, Pa., at around 9 a.m. when Smucker reported engine trouble.

The plane lost power, skidded into a grassy field and landed in trees about 500 feet from a busy road, said sheriff's Sgt. Mark Ross.

Smucker radioed for help about five miles north of Parr Airport, Ross said. The airport is four miles north of Zanesville.

Ross said Smucker got the plane's landing gear down before crashing and it stayed in one piece.

The other passengers were identified as Dave and Anne Parker and Cory and Cindy Judisack. Authorities did not have their hometowns.

Tourism costs township money Rendville: population 30

The Associated Press

PENINSULA, Ohio - Tourism in the Cuyahoga Valley National Recreation Area may be bringing money to some surrounding communities, but it could soon lead to bankruptcy for an area township and village.

Too few people - barely 1,800 - live in Boston Township and the village of Peninsula to pay for the roads, ambulances and other services that residents and the nearly 2 million visitors who come to the Cuyahoga Valley National Recreation Area each year need, according to a citizen task force.

The task force told Boston Township trustees last month that nothing can be done to stop the township about 30 miles south of Cleveland in Summit County from slipping into bankruptcy and eventual demise.

The committee that the township and Peninsula set up two years ago said the township's survival is based on setting up a long-range plan that includes annexing populated portions of the township and putting the village in "a growth mode."

"I know how they felt when they dropped the bomb on Hiroshima," Peninsula Mayor Edward Ruoff said when he heard the committee's findings.

Thousands of people travel to the township on weekends to hike the Ohio & Erie Canal towpath, ski at Boston Mills Ski Resort or explore Icebox Cave.

"Yes, [the park] is wonderful or Bath, it's wonderful for Akron, it's wonderful for Canton, it's wonderful for Cleveland," said Trustee Randolph Bergdorf. "But it ain't wonderful for us."

He said Boston Township and Peninsula clean up the debris when the tourists leave.

Some township and village residents blame the National Park Service, which has taken more than 80 percent of the township's 9,612 acres, removing them from the tax rolls.

But a 1992 study commissioned by the township, Peninsula and the National Park Service found that the township would still be operating at an annual deficit of more than $50,000 if the park had not been developed.

Cuyahoga Valley Superintendent John Debo Jr. knows the park has put a financial strain on the two communities, but he said the Park Service is starting to help more.

The Associated Press

RENDVILLE, Ohio - The First Baptist Church is one of the few things left in this central Ohio village, dubbed the state's smallest in the 1990 census.

In 1879, a young prospector from Chicago, William Patrick Rend, opened a shaft mine in southern Perry County. Two years later, the village of Rendville was incorporated about 55 miles southeast of Columbus. The First Baptist Church was organized.

Rendville was a booming coal-mining camp that attracted people from southern states. At the turn of the century, Rendville had 13 bars, a hotel, a restaurant, four churches and 1,500 people.

In 1927, coal miners went on strike, and many workers left the area looking for work. Few returned.

"They started mining again in 1930, but the town never recovered," said 88-year-old church deacon Vanarta Preston.

No one has run for mayor or the Village Council since 1991. The clerk-treasurer's term expired last March, and the vacancy was never filled.

"They're still a village, but they're not," said New Lexington attorney Joseph M. Allen, who worked as the village law director. "We could never keep enough people in office to hold a general election to vote to dissolve the village."

Now all that remains of Rendville is the 112-year-old church and about 30 residents, most of them church members.

Thelma Riley, 75, remembers her mother carrying her to church when she was a child. "It's a wonderful church," she said. "We're awfully glad it's here."

The church's stained-glass windows are dedicated to the memory of parishioners who have died. Some of their relatives still worship there, including Roberta Preston.

She was Rendville's postmaster for 15 years, until the office was closed in the late 1970s because of a lack of business. She worked another 15 years as postmaster of Moxahala until she retired in 1992.

"Somebody had to do it," she said.

Each Sunday, the Rev. Joseph L. Woods, 58, of Columbus, piles into his van with his grandsons for the three-hour round trip from Columbus to Rendville. Along the way, they pick up Thelma Lawson, 75, who lives in a nursing home in Columbus.

Ms. Lawson, who was born and raised in Rendville, recalled being baptized in the church when she was 12. Her sister, Eleanor Preston, is one of the church leaders.

"The best teaching I ever had came from this church," she said. Eventually, she moved from Rendville, first to Cleveland and later to Columbus. During that time, she said, she strayed from the church but now is back.

"It means everything to me," she said.

The red cloth-covered pews seat 200, but Woods figures he is having a good turnout if 20 people attend the weekly Sunday school and worship.

"It's just the faithful few here now, and until they move, the church will still be here," he said.

Whitewater accusations refuted

Administration officials allege GOP exploiting issue to damage Clinton

by Jim Abrams
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The administration blamed Republican sniping Sunday for much of the furor over Whitewater, and stressed there is no evidence of any wrongdoing. But GOP Sen. Phil Gramm countered that President Clinton is "getting deeper in a hole" that threatens his presidency.

Two top administration officials, Vice President Gore and White House adviser George Stephanopoulos, appeared on Sunday news programs to state their case that while mistakes have been made, the White House is cooperating fully in the Whitewater investigation.

They said Republicans are trying to exploit the issue because of the successes of Clinton's programs and his rising popularity.

There's "an enormous amount of partisanship," Gore said on NBC's "Meet the Press."

"What would you do if you were in the opposition and you saw an opportunity to make a dent in this growing popularity?" he asked. "Of course you would try to exploit it."

Stephanopoulos, speaking on ABC's "This Week With David Brinkley," said, "The Republicans can't run on the economy, they can't run on health care, they can't run on welfare, they can't run on crime, so they are going to try to exploit this issue."

"We shouldn't help them by making mistakes, that's our fault," he said.

Stephanopoulos was referring to the White House's admission that senior staffers received three private briefings from Treasury Department officials on the status of an investigation into a failed Arkansas savings and loan tied to the Clintons and their Whitewater land venture.

Special prosecutor Robert Fiske issued subpoenas Friday to senior White House officials to obtain information on the meetings, and White House chief counsel Bernard Nussbaum, who was involved in the briefings, on Saturday announced his resignation.

But Republicans charged the administration was involved in a coverup with overtones of Watergate.

"Richard Nixon turned a third-rate burglary into a constitutional crisis by not leveling, by interfering with the investigation," Gramm, R-Texas, said on ABC.

"If the president wants to serve this term out, he is going to have to begin by leveling with the American people." The president, Gramm said, "is getting deeper in a hole."

Sen. Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y., also told The Associated Press that as a result of what he says is the administration's attempt to stonewall the investigation, the issue has "the potential of being as great if not greater than Watergate."

The presidency is in danger, he said, "as a result of the continued conduct and the continued pattern of deception."

Gore insisted that whatever mistakes were made in permitting the briefings to take place, "there is now an aggressive determination to make absolutely certain that there is no interference of any kind."

He said that within an hour of the White House's being informed of the subpoenas, "the word went out clearly and firmly: You save everything, whether it's on your computer, whether it's in the wastebasket." Even janitors were told not to throw anything away, he said.

Gun gets singer Slick arrested

The Associated Press

TIBURON, Calif. -- Former Jefferson Starship/Jefferson Airplane lead singer Grace Slick was arrested Saturday for allegedly aiming a gun at police who had come to her house and ordering them to leave.

Officers from the Tiburon Police Department went to the singer's home after receiving a call at 3:30 a.m. from an intoxicated man who said a drunken woman was firing a shotgun in the house.

When officers arrived, 58-year-old Ira Lee came to the door yelling "kill me," police said. Officers subdued him.

Slick then came to the door carrying a shotgun, pointed it at the officers and yelled at them to leave her property, police said.

Slick refused to drop the shotgun when ordered to do so, police said. An officer wrestled the gun away from her when her attention was diverted.

The shotgun was unloaded, but officers found live and spent shotgun shells in the yard, police said.

Marin County Jail officials said Slick, 54, whose real name is Grace Johnson, was charged with felony assault and felony brandishing a weapon at a policeman. She posted $7,000 bail and was taken to Marin General Hospital for evaluation, Tiburon police said.

Tiburon is six miles north of San Francisco.

Dying teenager granted final wish to see imprisoned father

by Matthew Fordahl
The Associated Press

CHICAGO -- A dying 18-year-old's wish to see his imprisoned father one last time was granted Saturday after U.S. Attorney General Janet Reno overruled a warden's denial of the request.

In the middle of the night, guards secretly whisked 47-year-old Salvador Guzman from a Wisconsin prison to a Chicago hospital to see his son, David Stenner, who has leukemia.

"The Bureau of Prisons did temper justice with mercy in this case," said attorney Sheldon T. Zenner, who worked with the Starlight Foundation, a charity that tries to realize the wishes of sick children.

Details of the 25-minute meeting were kept private.

Reno and other federal prison officials over-rode the decision of John Hurley, warden of the federal prison in Oxford, Wis., Zenner said. Hurley had denied the visit on several occasions last week.

Bureau of Prison officials would only confirm that the meeting took place, and said Hurley would not answer questions.

Guzman is serving a 15-year sentence after being convicted in Portland, Ore., of conspiracy to distribute heroin. He's due to be released in 2006.

Stenner could not visit his father because he must stay in a sterile environment. He had an unsuccessful bone marrow transplant a month ago.

On Thursday, Illinois Gov. Jim Edgar and several other politicians tried to intervene, but the warden denied their requests.

'Canadian Bacon' a fitting legacy for John Candy

The Associated Press

FLINT, Mich. -- One of John Candy's final performances, playing a U.S. sheriff who leads a raid on Canada in the upcoming "Canadian Bacon," will be a fitting legacy for the late comedian, the director said.

"He was so intelligent and quick-witted. He brought a lot to the film and people will see that when it comes out," said Michael Moore, who produced and directed the movie. "It will be a real tribute to his talent."

Candy died Friday of a heart attack in his sleep just hours after completing what colleagues called a classic comedy scene for his new film "Wagons East." The portly comedian was 43.

Candy's body was found early Friday morning in his residence on the Durango, Mexico, set for the film in which he played a drunken stagecoach driver.

In "Canadian Bacon," scheduled for release this year, Candy plays a sheriff in Niagara Falls, N.Y., who leads a raid into Canada after the president picks Canada as a new Cold War enemy to keep the U.S. economy strong.

"He was responsible for getting 'Canadian Bacon' made," Moore said. "He was a great person to work with, very funny and outgoing, warm and giving to everyone around him."

Moore, who directed the 1989 satirical documentary "Roger & Me," said he spent 1 1/2 hours on the phone with Candy a couple of days before he died.

"I'm very sad," Moore said. "It's a real tragedy. He was a very special person to me."

Candy was the veteran of some 40 movies, including "Uncle Buck" and "Stripes."

"John Candy was a gentleman and a great comic talent," said comedian Steve Martin, who starred with Candy in "Planes, Trains & Automobiles." "I count myself extremely lucky to have had the opportunity to work with him."

People working with Candy in Mexico said he showed no signs of ill health.

William Sanderson, a bit player in "Wagons East," said Candy had a bad back but otherwise appeared well.

"He seemed fine. It's a tough shoot. He's up on a horse all day," Sanderson said in a telephone interview from Durango.

Sanderson, the film's co-star Richard Lewis, and its producer Gary Goodman all said Candy's performance as a 1860s wrong-way stagecoach driver was outstanding.

Men's team slips past Rockets

Bowling Green's Shane Kline-Ruminski looks for an open man during the Falcons 78-77 victory over Toledo Saturday. Kline-Ruminski had to leave the game in the second half due to an ankle injury.

Komives and Daniels BG in second half over UT

by Mike Kazimore
assistant sports editor

The Mid-American Conference playoffs do not start until Tuesday, but there was a post-season atmosphere in Anderson Arena Saturday night as the men's basketball team outlasted the Rockets of Toledo 78-77 in front of 4,972 screaming fans — the largest crowd to see a men's game in 10 years.

The win solidified second place in the Mid-American Conference for the Falcons (17-9 overall and 12-6 in the league). Toledo, on the other hand, dropped to 15-11, 10-8.

"This was one of those games where in the first two minutes you get physically drained," BG point guard Antonio Daniels said. "We were up for the game all week because we knew what kind of crowd was going to be here."

With just over 12 minutes remaining in the contest The Falcons found themselves in trouble as they trailed 55-45. During the next three minutes, however, BG went on a 11-0 run to regain the lead.

"It was defense that did it," Daniels said. "We played real good team defense and we were able to shut them down and make a nice little run."

Toledo would storm back behind the strong performance of its backcourt combination of Craig Thames and Archie Fuller. The two combined to score 16 of UT's final 19 points.

Ironically, however, Thames and Fuller were unable to execute on Toledo's last possession — costing the Rockets a victory.

With 11 seconds remaining and BG clinging to a 78-77 lead the Rockets found themselves with one last chance after a Falcon turnover. Toledo, opting not to use its final timeout, was unable to get off a good shot when Thames ran into Fuller.

"I didn't want a timeout because I didn't want them to set their defense," UT head coach Dan Gibson said. "We had the play called and the players knew what they were supposed to do — we just didn't execute."

"I ran into one of my players [Fuller] and it knocked me off balance and my shot fell short," Thames said. "I knew it was going to be a game where the last shot would decide it — we just miscued at the end."

While Thames and Fuller jump started Toledo's offense in the closing minutes BG received strong second half performances from the trio of Daniels, Shane Komives and Ray Lynch. Komives, saddled with four fouls, scored 21 points in just 23 minutes of action — including eight during a minute and a half stretch in the second stanza.

"With six minutes to go Shane came over and said that we should run a certain play — and of course it was for him," BG head coach Jim Larranaga said. "We ran it three straight times and that's when he buried those jumpers. You have to listen to your players when they offer you sound advice."

While UT had problems in shutting down Komives, Daniels proved to be more of a problem as he continually broke down the Rockets defense for easy scores in the closing minutes of the game. Daniels scored 18 points on the night, most of them from close range, although he connected on eight of his 11 field goal attempts.

Falcons win contest, lose Kline-Ruminski

by Glen Lubbert
managing editor

The pieces almost fell apart in the men's basketball team's Mid-American Conference puzzle Saturday.

Center Shane Kline-Ruminski saw an early exit from the 78-77 victory over Toledo as he went down grabbing his right ankle with 11:14 left in the game. Kline-Ruminski, who early in the second half had come out of the game after being kicked in the face, went to the bench in pain once again.

This time, however, he would not return. As the Falcons were fighting back into the game, Kline-Ruminski headed to the locker room with trainer Mike Messaros and then to the hospital.

"Mike Messaros told me he hurt his fibula and it's possible it is a fracture," head coach Jim Larranaga said.

Kline-Ruminski had X-rays taken on his ankle, but the tests were negative. He was diagnosed with a bad ankle sprain.

"They thought it was broken because they felt something in the spot that hurt," Kline-Ruminski said. "It turned out to be a bone cyst. It's not broken." Kline-Ruminski returned to the hospital later Saturday night for treatment and Larranaga also returned.

"When I was informed about Shane Kline-Ruminski, my first thoughts were for him," Larranaga said. "I know how disappointed he'll be if it is injured."

The Falcons had other troubles during the game that allowed Toledo to get an advantage. Forward Shane Komives had foul trouble and had to miss the first eight minutes of the second half and Kline-Ruminski was still in the locker room vomiting from heat exhaustion.

The Rockets were able to take advantage of BG's setbacks running up a 10-point lead. But Komives and Kline-Ruminski returned and sparked the Falcons who went on an 11-0 run to put BG up 56-55 with just over nine minutes to play.

But while that run put BG back in the game, it also put Kline-Ruminski out of the game.

"I just thought I was in the wrong place at the wrong time," Kline-Ruminski said. "Those kind of things happen to everyone. It just happened to me all in one game, one half really."

Even with the troubles, the Falcons once again proved they can handle the setbacks and still win.

"This team has learned to handle adversity, whatever it might be," Larranaga said. "That's all we can ask this team is to give it its best. I'm sure this team will continue to do that."

"We hope it's with Shane Kline-Ruminski, because he's been such a leader for us. But if he's not there physically, I know he'll be there mentally and spiritually, and that's just as important if not more so."

Women pull away from Rockets in second half

by Mark Leonard DeChant
sports editor

Who would have guessed that the women's basketball team had already clinched the MAC tournament's top seed going into Saturday's game against Toledo?

Certainly not the Rockets, who were blasted 83-69 by BG in a clash of the Mid-American Conference's top two teams.

The Falcons overcame an early 10-point deficit to down UT and avenge an 86-76 loss to Toledo earlier in the season. BG has racked up 17 consecutive victories since that game.

MAC tournament victory or no MAC tournament victory, the Falcons (23-3 overall, 17-1 league) are a sure bet to gain an invitation to the NCAA tournament, which begins in just over a week.

The Rockets, who were once ranked as high as 23rd nationally, fall to 20-6 overall, 13-5 in MAC play.

UT coach Bill Fennelly spoke kind words of his team despite the loss.

"I feel like the Buffalo Bill fan — we're back, and everybody's gonna deal with us," he said. "We didn't win the game, and I told our kids we didn't lose the game either."

"We played our ever-loving guts out."

Toledo had more than guts late in the first half. They had a 33-23 lead courtesy of a pair of three-pointers by Denise Pickenbaugh and two buckets by Latoja Harris.

BG found itself in unfamiliar territory — facing a double-digit deficit at home.

Co-Player of the Game Lori Albers said she and the other BG veterans were not troubled by the Falcons' early struggles.

"We've played in situations like this before, and so we knew we could come back," she said. "We just had to relax."

In the final 6:18 of the first period, the Rockets amassed exactly three points, while six Falcons scored a total of 17 to pull BG ahead by four at half-time.

Two plays right before intermission sent the crowd into a frenzy and set the tone for the second half.

With BG trailing by one, Talita Scott buried the second three-pointer of her career at the eight-second mark.

Albers then stole the in-bounds pass and dished off to Sharleen Hooper, who lofted in a 10-footer at the buzzer to make the score 40-36 in BG's favor.

"That was I think the turning point," Albers said. "We were struggling to get back and get a good lead on them. We got some steals and it was like a five-point turnaround."

Toledo led just once in the second half — a Mimi Olson jumper gave UT a 41-40 advantage — but the game belonged to BG.

After the Rockets' brief glimpse at a lead, BG went on a 32-10 run over the next 10 minutes to open a 21-point gap that dropped the jaws of many of the 3,268 fans in attendance.

Scott, also named Co-Player of the Game, hit six-of-12 from the floor and seven-of-eight from the foul line to score 20 points. She grabbed a game-high 10 rebounds and collected four assists in 40 minutes of play.

Michelle Shade scored 11 points, and Tandy Williams and Susie Cassell 10 apiece. Cassell also contributed seven assists and four steals.

Albers had what she described as her "best game of the year," hitting nine-of-11 field goal attempts for 20 points, and getting six assists, five rebounds and three steals.

Both coaches were impressed with BG's 6-foot center, who, along with Scott, Cassell, Williams and J.J. Nuesmeyer,

Hockey swept on final weekend

Team has lost four of its last five contests heading into CCHA playoffs

by Brian Mart
News sports writer

At least the Falcon hockey team won't be heading into the playoffs with a sense of false confidence.

The Universities of Michigan and Notre Dame made sure of that by combining to sweep BG over the weekend by scores of 2-1 and 4-1 respectively. Saturday's loss to UND marked the end of the regular season.

BG (17-16-2 overall, 15-13-2 CCHA) has lost four of its last five, heading into the first round of the playoffs.

The game against UND saw the Falcons score the first goal 17 seconds into the contest, but go scoreless for the 59 plus minutes that followed. Mike Hall put BG up early when he tipped in a Sean Pronger pass right in front of the goal.

BG put pressure on UND goaltender Greg Louder early and often in the first period, putting 20 shots on goal. However, despite outshooting the Fighting Irish by 11 in that first stanza, the Falcons found the score tied 1-1 when it ended.

Notre Dame (11-20-5, 9-16-5) won the game in an uncharacteristic fashion for them - with special teams play. The Irish penalty killing unit - ranked dead last in the CCHA - shut down the Falcon power play completely. BG was 0-7 with the man advantage, including a 1:35 stretch in the second period in which the Falcons put only one shot on net.

"Their penalty killing was very aggressive and they were able to chip the puck out of the zone," right wing Brian Holzinger said. "On the power play you have to outwork the other team and that wasn't the case tonight."

The Irish power play - also ranked last in the conference - connected on two goals that pushed a 2-1 UND lead to 4-1 to put the game away.

"Their power play worked well against our penalty killing tonight, that's all," center Curtis Fry said.

The Falcon offense that generated those 20 first period shots could only produce 16 in the final two periods. Louder, who made 35 saves, was tested rarely in the final 40 minutes.

"We have to be a sharper offensive team," coach Jerry York said. "Our failure to score 5-on-3 reflects that. Louder played well, but we had chances to bury the puck and we should have buried the puck."

Although the result was the same on Friday, BG played a much stronger game against Michigan - the CCHA champions.

The Falcons - spurred on by a sellout crowd of 5,004 - gave the Wolverines everything they could handle before UM pulled out the 2-1 victory on Senior Night at the Ice Arena. The crowd was the fourth largest in BGSU Ice Arena history.

BG led 1-0 after two periods and had 1:10 remaining on a power play when the third period began.

With 45 seconds gone in the period, UM center Mike Stoe aggressively took the puck from Jeff Wells and fed teammate Rick Willis in front of the goal, who converted the shorthanded goal.

"I wanted to make it a two goal lead early [in the third period] with the power play, but Stone just took the puck from Jeff and knotted the game," York said.

David Oliver's power play goal at 7:02 of the third period was the game winner. BG's lone goal was scored by Tom Glantz in the second. Jason Helbing and Fry assisted on the score.

"We played with a lot of heart and a lot of character," York said. "I'm sure Michigan feels fortunate they won the game."

"We played check for check and stride for stride with the top team in the nation," Pronger said. "Hopefully we'll see them down the road and even things up."

BG will host the opening round playoff series at the Ice Arena starting Friday. The probable opponent will be Ferris State, who beat Michigan 6-2 on Saturday. Miami has indicated that they will most likely select Alaska-Fairbanks as their first-round opponent.

Missed chances lead to BG loss

by Randy Setter
assistant sports editor

If you don't look good, we'll make you look good. The phrase could be a slogan for a cosmetics company or a hair-care products line, but it also describes the BG hockey team.

With fifth place still up for grabs going into the weekend, the Falcons relegated themselves to sixth place with a lackluster performance against the Irish Saturday and a close 2-1 loss to the Wolverines Friday. Ohio State helped out BG's cause, beating Miami 4-3 in overtime Friday night.

It wasn't that Notre Dame overpowered the Falcons offensively or goaltender Greg Louder shut down the Falcon offense like Steve Shields did for Michigan the previous night. Instead, the Falcons' missed opportunities made Notre Dame look like the better team.

Left wing Kevin Lune had a shot blocked and right wing Brian Holzinger fired a sharp shot into the chest of goaltender Greg Louder with only one Irish defender back at 10:30 of the third period.

Defenseman Todd Reirden shoveled the puck into Louder's pads on a breakaway attempt in the second period.

Right wing Curtis Fry was thwarted by the post facing an open net during the first period. The Falcons also could not capitalize on a 5-on-3 attempt.

"If we could have capitalized on our chances, the game would have been over real early," left wing Sean Pronger said. "Any team can beat any team in this league. If you're not on top of your game, you're going to get beat; it's just that simple."

BG outshot Notre Dame 20-9 in the first period, but fell asleep the rest of the contest. They outshot Notre Dame 37-26, but most of the shots were long-shots on net - easily handled by Louder.

"They picked it up in the second period where we left off," Reirden said. "We didn't bury our chances, I missed my breakaway opportunity."

The Falcons went 0-7 on the power play against a team with a penalty kill percentage of .722, holding down last place in the CCHA. The BG power play unit had trouble with Notre Dame all season, connecting on only 3 of 19 (.158) man-advantage situations while other Irish opponents averaged .278. The Irish shutout the Falcons, 0-12, during both games at the JACC on the power play.

"Their [penalty kill] was working harder than us," Pronger said. "We have to work even harder than they do. They were busting tail to get away from us and they did."

The Falcons, who rode a three-game win streak into the playoffs last season, have dropped four of their last five contests this season. BG will try to pull together their game before facing Ferris State in the first round of the CCHA Playoffs, beginning Friday night at the Ice Arena.

"Our team has a lot of character and we'll turn it into a positive," Reirden said.

Funderburke leads OSU past Knight's Hoosiers

Ohio State's Lawrence Funderburke muscled his way around Indiana's Alan Henderson during OSU's 82-78 win Sunday.

by Rusty Miller
The Associated Press

COLUMBUS -- Ohio State overcame an 18-point first-half deficit, holding Indiana without a field goal for a span of more than 11 minutes in the second half, and upset the 17th-ranked Hoosiers, 82-78 Sunday.

Lawrence Funderburke, who started his college career at Indiana before transferring to Ohio State, scored 25 points to lead the Buckeyes. Funderburke was involved in a shoving match with Indiana's Pat Graham in the final seconds that was broken up by the officials before any punches could be landed.

The loss knocked the Hoosiers (18-7) two games back of Big Ten leader Michigan going into the last week of conference play. Michigan played Purdue Sunday afternoon.

Ohio State (12-15, 5-11 Big Ten) had lost its last two games, five of its last six and eight of 10. But the Buckeyes had history on their side, having upset the then-No. 1 Hoosiers by an almost identical 81-77 score a year ago in overtime at St. John Arena.

Indiana had won the first matchup of the season, 87-83 in overtime.

With 14:10 left, Indiana took a 60-49 lead on Damon Bailey's 3-point field goal. But the Hoosiers' next field goal wouldn't come until just 1:07 remained, with Alan Henderson scoring inside to cut Ohio State's lead to 77-71.

Over that period of 11:03, Indiana missed all nine of its shots from the field and had nine turnovers.

Ohio State finally pulled even at 67 in the bruising defensive struggle with 6:40 left on a 3-pointer by little-used senior Jimmy Ratliff. The shot marked Ratliff's fifth 3-pointer this season in 22 games.

Funderburke hit a 15-foot jumper with 5:08 left to give the Buckeyes the lead for good. Backup point guard Doug Etzler then picked up a pass tipped away by Ratliff and was fouled on the breakaway by Bailey, hitting both foul shots.

Etzler finished with a career-high 12 points and matched his career-best of six assists.

Charles Macon, a former Mr. Basketball in Indiana, followed a Bailey turnover with a short half hook before Greg Simpson capped the 11-0 run with a tip-in to make it 75-67 with 1:59 left.

The Hoosiers clawed back to pull to 80-78 on a 3-pointer by Todd Leary with 11.8 seconds left. Fouled on the inbounds pass, Jamie Skelton hit the second foul shot to push the lead back to three.

Lessig wins twice, breaks own record niques in the event put her on a new level.

Once wasn't enough for junior shot-putter Nikki Lessig.

Lessig won the shot put twice this weekend in two separate NCAA Last Chance qualification meets. In the process she also broke her existing school record in the event and improved her provisional qualifying NCAA mark.

The junior, who won the Mid-American Conference Indoor Championship in the event last week, started her amazing performance on Thursday in Ypsilanti, Mich., winning the first of her two titles with a throw of 49 feet, 11 3/4 inches.

On Saturday in Ann Arbor, Mich., Lessig shattered her school record mark with a throw of 50 feet 7 inches. Along with breaking her school record twice, Lessig also improved her chances of qualifying for the NCAA Indoor Championships next week in Indianapolis, Indiana, head coach Steve Price said.

She is currently a provisional qualifier in the event but has a good chance of making the field, Price said.

"It's not automatic," he said. "But if you look at NCAA results from last year, the second throw would have placed her seventh in the country--which would have made her an All-American."

Price added that her experimentation with different tech-

"She's on a whole new plateau right now," he said. "When her technique is on, she's very good."

Along with Lessig, BG could also send sprinter Scott Thompson to the national meet next weekend.

Thompson, who provisionally qualified for the NCAA's in his first meet of the season, false started in the finals of the 55-meter hurdles on Thursday in Ypsilanti. Before the disappointing finish, he easily won his preliminary heat with a time of 7.31 seconds. In the semifinals, he ran badly but still won the heat with a time of 7.38 seconds, head coach Sid Sink said.

A sore leg kept Thompson from improving his time at Saturday's meet, but he should still make the NCAA's, Sink said.

"Right now we think he has a real good chance of making it," he said.

Sink said that both he and Price will be notified by the NCAA on Monday regarding Thompson's and Lessig's fate.

Freshman pole vaulter Travis Downey ended his indoor season with a third place finish in the event with a vault of 16 feet 1 inch, but failed to qualify for the national meet. His brother, Shawn, a senior vaulter at Purdue, won the meet with a vault of 17 feet.

Ayers denies rumors of future resignation

by Rusty Miller
The Associated Press

COLUMBUS -- Ohio State basketball coach Randy Ayers squelched a rumor Sunday that he would resign in the face of an NCAA investigation. Ayers said he "would never walk out on Ohio State."

He acknowledged that he had heard rumors about his future and said a caller to his radio program asked him if he were leaving to take the position of athletic director at his alma mater, Miami of Ohio.

"The answer is no," Ayers said. "Where do these rumors get started?"

R.C. Johnson, Miami's athletic director, said he also had heard the rumor and there was no substance to it. He said he had no plans to leave Miami.

"Unless you know something that I don't," he said with a laugh. "Did you talk to my president?"

Johnson had spoken with officials at Northwestern about their vacant athletic director's position, but later withdrew his name. The position has been filled.

Ayers is 97-51 with two Big Ten championships in his five years as coach at Ohio State. The Buckeyes, 12-15 on the year, upset 17th-ranked Indiana 82-78 Sunday.

Ayers' Ohio State contract extends through the 1998-99 season. "I would never walk out on Ohio State," Ayers said. "You have my word on that."

Ohio State's men's basketball program has acknowledged it committed 17 NCAA violations in the recruitment of Damon Flint, a Cincinnati high school basketball star. Last May, the NCAA ruled that Flint could not attend Ohio State. He now plays for the University of Cincinnati.

It has been more than one year since the NCAA first found out about the violations dealing with Flint, but it has yet to hand down a final resolution of its investigation.

The NCAA reportedly returned to the Ohio State campus last summer to investigate players attempting to purchase new cars and those whom the players had asked to co-sign on the auto loans.

Fuel was added to the rumors after Ohio State athletic director Jim Jones took early retirement Feb. 18 and longtime associate athletic director Phyllis Bailey followed suit five days later.

Ohio State President E. Gordon Gee disclosed soon after Jones' announcement that the NCAA investigation had spread to other sports.

David Williams II, an Ohio State vice president who set up the search committee for a new athletic director, said the person chosen for the job would not be hired to fire either Ayers or football coach John Cooper.

"There is no truth to that because we're not thinking about firing any of our coaches," he said.

Earlier this week, Gee gave a vote of confidence to Ayers on a radio call-in show.

During an interview Thursday, Ayers said, "I think everybody here has supported me 100 percent and I don't think that's going to change in the next couple of weeks. Jim Jones and I had a special relationship. Jim's the guy who gave me an opportunity."

Gee was in New York and could not be reached for comment Sunday, but his spokesman, Malcolm Baroway, said Thursday that Gee had "absolute trust in Randy."

Ayers said that he has not spoken directly with the NCAA for six or eight months. He also said he had been in touch with Ohio State attorneys who are talking with the NCAA.

Ayers said the NCAA investigation and the lengthy wait for a ruling have been difficult on him.

"The disappointing thing is that it's extended this long," Ayers said.

Cavs drop Bulls 99-95

RICHFIELD, Ohio -- B.J. Armstrong committed a critical 10-second violation in the final minute and Cleveland scored its last five points on free throws as the streaking Cavaliers beat the slumping Chicago Bulls 99-95 Sunday.

The Cavaliers won their 10th in a row, one away from the team record set twice before. The Bulls have lost five straight, their longest skid since they dropped six in a row in April 1989.

John Williams, subbing for injured Brad Daugherty, led Cleveland with 23 points and made the foul shot that put Cleveland ahead by four with 5.1 seconds to play. Bobby Phills scored 19 and Gerald Wilkins had 16.

Pete Myers scored 17, Luc Longley 16 and Scottie Pippen and Horace Grant 15 each for the Bulls. Pippen grabbed 14 rebounds.

Trent scores 30 in leading Bobcats to Conference title

The Associated Press

ATHENS -- Gary Trent scored 30 points as Mid-American Conference first-place finisher Ohio University defeated Ball State 91-76 Saturday.

The triumph was the Bobcats' 10th in a row and 22nd overall, giving them a school record for regular season victories. They will host Western Michigan in the first round of the conference tournament Tuesday.

Seniors shine for hoop teams

by Garrett Walkup
News sports writer

It really does not get much better.

The classic rivalry between BG and UT gave us yet another great evening of tension, drama and heartbreak, woven into basketball. And there were more subplots than a bad soap opera.

It was college hoops at its finest and who wants to sit up in press row? Not me, I'll take a foot's worth of bleacher in the student section rather than one of those cushy media seats anytime.

It was Senior Night at Anderson Arena which meant that seven BG players were participating in their last regular season home game.

In the women's game all five of their seniors started. It was their night to shine, and that is just what they did.

Lori Albers ripped chord -- missing only two shots all night. Although she did not throw one down, I have called city council and asked them to combine Labor Day and Arbor Day into Albers Day.

A simple request I think.

"I'll be glad when Albers graduates, that's for sure," UT coach Bill Fennelly said.

We won't Lori. Congratulations and good luck. Also on fire was Talita Scott who even had the Rocket fans rooting for her. They weren't shouting "Go Toledo," they were shouting "Go Talita."

At least I think they were. Thank you Talita, you played great.

Also a congratulations to newsroom favorite, point guard Susie Cassell, who started in her 101st-straight game. She broke a women's school record, is No. 2 on BG's all-time career assist list and 5th on the MAC list.

The men's game also had many stories other than determining who they play in the MAC quarter finals.

The game pitted Toledo St. John's Jesuit High School versus Toledo Scott High School. Two of BG's starters, sophomore Shane Komives and freshman Jay Larranaga went to St. John's and three of UT's players went to Scott High School. Next year BG picks up another St. John's player, point guard Denny Amrhein.

This was also junior Shane Kline-Ruminski's first home game since he broke a bone in his hand. Let's just say he didn't have a good day. Kline-Ruminski played very well but was mugged in the process. He was kicked in the head, was sick at half-time and also had to leave early due to a possible fracture of his right fibula. Kline-Ruminski is the Norm Peterson of Wood County hospital.

"Good afternoon everybody." "Shane!" The emergency room shouts.

This game concluded the regular season debut of freshmen Jay Larranaga and shoe-in MAC Freshman of the Year Antonio Daniels. Both have had fantastic seasons and will only improve for next year.

But the game balls go to junior Ray Lynch and the sixth man BG crowd. Down the stretch it was Lynch and the home crowd who put BG over the top to win the game.

Lynch had a quiet 11 points but nine of those were in the last eight minutes of the game. Ray was certainly rollin'.

Finally I want to thank the 5000 plus Falcon crazies who brought the house down and all stormed onto the court after the wet-yourself ending to the men's game. That was absolutely one of the best crowds ever at Anderson and will only be the beginning to a great post season.

Can you say dynasty? I knew you could.

Finally, something for college that just got less expensive.

Oester returns to Reds as minor league advisor

by The Associated Press

PLANT CITY, Fla. — Ron Oester ended his major-league coaching career when he resigned from the Cincinnati Reds in protest of Tony Perez's firing last May. He has no regrets.

Oester, 37, has returned to the Reds as an advisor for minor league operations. His brief stint as a major-league coach last season convinced him he isn't cut out for managing high-priced players.

"I have no desire to baby-sit 25 guys every day," Oester said.

Oester was known for his hustle and hot temper during 17 years playing in the Reds' organization. He was a second baseman on the Reds' 1990 World Series championship team.

He became a roving infield instructor in 1991 and took over as manager of the Reds' Class AA Chattanooga club in 1992. He started last year as first base coach, but quickly became disillusioned.

He learned that stroking egos is a big part of managing in the major leagues. Oester is more direct: He'd rather confront lag-gards than coddle them.

"If you're the manager, don't go around the clubhouse asking people if they can play," he said. "Tony asked people. People have told me Davey Johnson had to go around and almost beg people to play last year. That's not baseball."

That's the way it was in Cincinnati last season. When general manager Jim Bowden made Perez the scapegoat for the team's lackluster start, Oester decided it was time for him to leave, too.

"The game has changed," he said.

He went back to his 80-acre farm in southwest Ohio and grew corn.

"I knew it wasn't a good career move," he said. "I didn't care."

You have principles and you stand by them."

Oester couldn't fathom players who found excuses not to try their best. Oester's main attribute as a player was his hustle.

"You know what bothers me the most?" he said. "It's when a rookie comes into camp like he's been there 20 years. Comes busting through the doors: 'Here I am.' I hate that."

Shula frustrated with small payroll

by The Associated Press

CINCINNATI -- Coach Dave Shula is frustrated by the Cincinnati Bengals' failure to sign free agents.

The Bengals, who had the NFL's smallest payroll and worst record last season, were hoping to improve markedly by signing some big-name free agents over the winter. So far, they're 0-for-2.

San Diego center Courtney

Hall and Seattle cornerback Dwayne Harper have rejected offers from the Bengals, who have yet to sign a free agent.

"Some stark realities are starting to settle in," Shula said. "Maybe we'll have to settle on setting our sights on backups for other teams, guys that are not recognized in the NFL as being great players but who will make our team better by a small degree."

MEN

"Daniels really caused us problems because he's physically bigger and stronger than us," UT head coach Dan Gibson said.

In the first half BG jumped out to an early 17-12 advantage as the Falcons' two Shanes (Komives and Kline-Ruminski) combined to score all of the points.

Kline-Ruminski went on to score 17 points before leaving the game with a severely sprained ankle.

Toledo was able to regroup and pull even at 41 at intermission the aggressive inside play of Scoop Williams who scored 12 of his 19 markers before the half.

WOMEN

were honored in Senior Night ceremonies before the game.

"I'll tell you what," Fennelly said. "I'll be glad when Lori Albers graduates."

Clark was without Albers when the Rockets won the first matchup.

"Lori does add another dimension to our team," Clark said. "She was shooting so well from the outside tonight. She stayed there a little bit longer than maybe she normally does. I'm glad she's back."

Ball-handling and possession led to Toledo's demise Saturday. The Rockets turned the ball over 24 times, while collecting just 11 assists.

In sharp contrast, BG had just 11 turnovers while getting 27 assists. The Falcons also out-shot UT from both the floor and the line, got 12 steals to Toledo's three, and stayed even in the rebounding war.

"Sometimes people are just better and today, as far as the final score goes, they were better," Fennelly said. "It may be crazy, but I'd like to get the chance to play them one more time."

If the rematch occurs, the league tournament title will be at stake.

Something for everyone: Easystreet Cafe makes dining enjoyable

By Tony Falcone

The gentle turn of the antique ceiling fans, colorful stained glass, oak furnishings and brass railings present a refreshing atmosphere at Easystreet Cafe.

But it's not just the scenery that brings customers back - it's the quality, quantity and selection of foods and entertainment. In fact, in The BG News' own poll, Easystreet Cafe was crowned favorite restaurant in Bowling Green the past three years, not to mention favorite bar last year. For Easystreet's owners, Victor and Deborah Pirooz, diversity is the name of the game.

"Downstairs, we offer over 30 appetizers, 45 sandwich selections, 76 varieties of beer, and homemade soups and salads," Victor said. "We also have 92 percent lean, half-pound hamburgers prepared 12 different ways."

Also, Easystreet offers steaks cut from certified Black Angus beef, not to mention chocolate fondues, specialty cheesecakes and homemade apple bettys.

Easystreet's entertainment schedule is as varied as the menu.

"All of our entertainment is upstairs," Victor said. "We have a little bit of everything."

Youngsters beware - Easystreet's upstairs is limited to 19 and over Monday through Thursday, and 21 and over on Friday and Saturday. If you do get in, you won't be bored.

"We have something different every night," Victor said.

"Monday is jazz, Tuesday is open mike, and Wednesday through Saturday we have bands. We get pop alternative, blues, jazz, reggae, acoustic rock, and even some grunge."

Victor has always thought of franchising.

"Bowling Green is really our pilot restaurant," he said. "We are in the process of setting up locations in Columbus and Cincinnati, and possibly more south in the future."

One of Easystreet's more unique features is the "Hall of Foam."

"You can get your name in the 'Hall of Foam' if you drink all 76 beers," Victor said. "We don't expect you to do it all in a night - it might take two years. Our record, though, is eight days."

Upon completion, Pirooz also gives out a T-shirt and mug. Additionally, your name is entered into a drawing for a vacation.

"We've sent people to the Bahamas and Hilton Head. The vacation is worth about $750."

Easystreet's upstairs also offers a Friday happy hour from 4-7 p.m. Extensive drink specials are offered, as well as a special "Munchie Buffet." Admission is only $1.

For all you non-drinkers, Easystreet also offers over 25 non-alcoholic "libations."

Victor finds the business rewarding.

"People come from all over. Graduates come back to enjoy a burger and onion rings. We get a good mix of people. That's what we're here for."

Easystreet is open 11-11 Monday through Thursday, 11-12 Friday and Saturday, and 11:30-9 on Sunday. All major credit cards and personal checks are accepted. Victor employs about 50 people, half being students.

The Easystreet Cafe sticks to one simple theme - "Fun food and fun times for fun people."

"Dining out should be a fun, enjoyable experience," Victor said. "We have established a place where you can be wined, dined and entertained at a very reasonable price and all under the same roof."
